

African-American Episcopalian Bishop Michael Curry's sermon at the royal wedding is a marvelous combination of witnessing to Jesus, and Christian Unity. His quoting Jesuit theologian Teilhard de Chardin is unprecedented in such a world-wide event. However, he also is an example of the difficulty within the Anglican Communion, where many find his espousal of same sex marriage and other moral matters to be divisive. Roman Catholics too differ with him on moral issues. Let us pray that the Holy Spirit will help us know when we must work together as witnesses to Christ's love, and when we must disagree. Please enjoy the video below.

